24 February 1955

Dear Brayton:

I am asking Pearre Cabell to take this note to you in answer to your very kind letter of 14 February. You can rest assured that I have completely forgotten the little incident. I think that both of us were wise in not going counter to the judgment of the man in command of the particular operation even though at the time we might have differed with it. As a matter of fact, the decision probably spared me a long and fruitless vigil at the airport which poor Frank took in my place, and the result would have probably been the same.

I have asked Pearre to reassure Bob on the subject. He is doing a fine job and we are all back of him.

Needless to say, we remain greatly in your debt for the time and skill you are showing in guiding this important enterprise and I will take the first opportunity to come out and visit you. I also owe [redacted] a visit.

I do not know whether you ever received my message of thanks for the supply of pepper you sent me a year ago to keep the pepper machine going. All this helps to keep up our spirits and energy here at this end.
